Title: Sentinel Printing collection

Dates of Creation: [ca. 1930s-1980s]

Physical Description: 20 cm of textual records and 2 maps

Administrative History:

The Inland Sentinel was established in May 1880 by John Hagan, a newspaper serving the Central Interior region of British Columbia with headquarters in Emory, B.C and shortly after in Yale, B.C. In 1884 the newspaper moved to Kamloops, with the first Kamloops issue published on July 31, 1884 and establishing headquarters east of town. A new building was built in 1886 between the Kamloops Courthouse and Gordon, but Hagan sold the paper later that year to Hugh McCutcheon. The paper would move again in 1897 (Raven's Hall) and 1912 (northwest of old Federal building, then the Beckman block). In 1896 the paper was bought by a syndicate headed by Senator Hewitt Bostock. By 1900 Mark Wade was the editor of the paper, and would soon become its owner until 1912 when it changed hands to D.B. Johnstone.

In 1916 the newspaper would merge with the Kamloops Standard (1897-1910) to form the Kamloops Standard-Sentinel.

The paper would merge again in 1924, when it was acquired by R.G. Patterson, the owner of the Kamloops Telegram (1916-1924). The new paper would be called the Kamloops Sentinel. In 1926 a new building was erected at 209 Victoria Street, and the next year a book binding operation was added to their printing capabilities. 1932 saw the company branch out and acquire CFJC radio, with an increase in newspaper frequency to include Monday extras. In 1954 a new building was built, with an official opening happening in 1955 which also saw the change from a weekly publication to a daily publication.

The paper's name was changed to reflect the increased publication to the Kamloops Daily Sentinel and continued to be well-regarded in the community and across Canada until it closed in 1987.

Scope and Content:

Collection consists of materials produced by the commercial printing operation of the Kamloops Daily Sentinel newspaper, known as Sentinel Printing. Records include promotional materials such as posters, booklets, and brochures; and office stationery such as envelopes, letterhead, business cards, invoices, and report forms for various local and regional businesses and organizations.

Custodial History:

Accession #1977.058 was donated to the Kamloops Museum and Archives on July 5, 1977 by A. Campbell for the Kamloops News (another local newspaper publication). Records were initially integrated into the Vertical Files collection, before being brought together as a distinct collection during reprocessing in 2022. Whole materials related to local elections (lists of electors) were removed prior to reprocessing by KMA staff and integrated into the Kamloops Electoral Materials collection, and remains separated. Some additional material was noted as being removed pending transfer, but has been reintegrated into this collection where possible during reprocessing.
